By the mid-1700s Philadelphia was the largest and most cosmopolitan city in British North America. It was also becoming a center of scientific inquiry, medicine, invention, and technological innovation. Want to know how to navigate the Victorian Web? Click here. Human knowledge is but an accumulation of small facts, made by successive generations of men, the little bits of knowledge and experience carefully treasured up by them growing at length into a mighty pyramid. Though Thomas Edison is usually credited with the invention of the light bulb, the famous American inventor wasn't the only one who contributed to the development of this revolutionary technology. It all started with ears, Chester Greenwood's ears. Chester's ears got cold. They got so cold something had to be done. That something was an invention by a fifteen-year-old boy that would support him for the rest of his life. - Men Of Science And Invention,
